KEYTESVILLE, - MISSOURI.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie says in an article on "The Gospel of Wealth," contributed to the Pall Mall Budget:

Time was when the words concerning the rich man entering heaven were regarded as a hard saying. To-day, when all questions are probed to the bottom, and the standards of faith receive the most liberal interpretations, the startling verse has been relegated to the rear to await the next kindly revision, as one of those things which cannot be quite understood, but which, meanwhile-it is carefully to be observed -are not to be understood literally.

Mr. Carnegie argues further that the text means that the millionaire must get rid of his money before he dies by founding libraries, colleges. hospitals and laboratories. "This much is sure," he says. "Against such riches as these no bar will be found at the gates of paradise." The text means all that and more. It means that the rich man must be generous but that he must begin by being just. If he has acquired -his money by the oppression of others. he must restore to them what he has taken from them before he gives what he does not own. The "kingdom of heaven" a rich man must stoop to enter is a condition of mind in which all injustice, including his own, whether it is legalized or not, is odious to him. Before any steel rail maker can love justice he must learn to hate the $17 a ton tax that he has heretofore insisted on forcing other people to pay for his benefit. When he is in that frame of mind he will be able to see that libraries, hospitals and laboratories founded on oppression are not acceptable in the eyes of eternal justice. If Mr. Carnegie is interested in the scriptural view of money, it might give him additional light on it to read over again carefully the remarkable chapter in which the Catholic epistle and ex officio collector of the revenue of

A HOUSEKEEPER'S HEAVEN.

The pleasant prediction is made that drud gery will be abolished from the household and the coccupation

Valuable Advice for the Present Day.

Mrs. Helen E. Sterrett, in a recent num ber of the Forum, contributes an article entitled "Housekeeping in the Future." In it she tells how in a few years electricity will supply light for the home, the family cooking and washing will be done outside, and there will be so little work in the household that the occupation of the domestic servant will be gone.

But Mrs. Sterrett's article is simply a prediction, and has no more than a passing interest for the ladies who live in 1890. Their social and household cares are straining their delicate, nervous system, and the result is terrible. Headaches, backaches, and womanly ills are growing alarmingly common. Many of them find that memory is failing; they are unable to recall the names of friends or tell whether they have performed some of their usual household duties. Their nerves are in such a condition that very slight causes, or perhaps no cause at all, may irritate them. Life grows to be a burden. There is no need for despair, but there is great need of caution. Their nerves should be built up, life fortified and brain restored with that remarkable preparation, Paine's Celery Compound. Instead of the depressed and languid feelings, after the Compound has been used, they will feel active, vigorous, and happy. To those who are weak and failing, and desire health and happiness instead of illness and misery, we earnestly urge that they act upon this advice.
